Our Approach

We believe there are likely multiple “roots” causing your condition; usually any combination of musculoskeletal, neurological, metabolic, chemical, hormonal, or psychological.

We assess the function of your physical, neurological, metabolic, and psychological systems to identify avenues to affect your system in a positive way. We work with the functionality of your systems and how well they communicate to each other- not merely if they are working or not. We respect the complexity of the body and understand there is likely not one singular “root cause” of your problem.

Rather than focusing on name calling (diagnosing) we find the best solution for you. If we don't think we are your answer or not the only one, we will work with you to coordinate a team of physicians and providers who will best suite your needs; locally, regionally, or globally.

Getting Started | Our Process

A consultation call is free of charge and will take 15 minutes. At the end of the call, if you feel this is what you are looking for, we can schedule an in-office examination.

Our examination is designed to thoroughly comb your system for dysfunctions that may otherwise be “within normal limits”, determine if these dysfunctions are causing or provoking your symptoms or conditions, and test various ways to affect and change your specific dysfunctions for the better. We believe this is the most crucial aspect of the exam which allows us to avoid the “guess, treat, and check” game so commonly played in the current healthcare model.

From there, we will find out which treatment program is best for you and your current situation and goals: weekly/monthly service based, daily intensive 2-4 week program, or membership style.
